

For Release on September 18th:

At 8pm on Friday, November 18th at the Loring Theater (previously the Music Box Theater) The Fattenin' Frogs and The Boys 'N' the Barrels will be coming together for "Up From the Delta" a 10th anniversary tribute to the O' Brother Where Art Thou soundtrack. They will be joined by Javier Matos (of the Innocent Sons) and other special guests for an evening of music taken from and inspired by the movie.

In 2001, O' Brother Where Art Thou and producer T-Bone Burnett won the Grammy for Best Album, beating out the likes of U2 and Bob Dylan. The album is credited with bringing bluegrass and blues back to the main stage and has inspired everyone involved with "Up From the Delta." Berek Awend of The Fattenin' Frogs sums up the impact of the album and the movie, "O Brother Where Art Thou introduced me to the roots of American music. It made me dig deeper and learn about the roots of blues, country, gospel and bluegrass. For a Jewish kid from St. Louis Park, these were topics that required a guide. The Coen Brothers and 'O Brother [Where Art Thou] were the guides that provided a common thread to find people to play music with and play music for."
